Work Programme performance

- Over a quarter of a million jobseekers have escaped long term unemployment and found lasting work (normally at least six months).
- Work Programme performance is improving since being launched in June 2011. Up until the end of June 2012, almost 24,000 had found lasting work. By December 2012, this had increased to over 242,000. The latest figure is ten times that of June 2012 and over two and a half times the number in December 2011, with 252,000 finding lasting work.
- In the last 3 months 44,000 people have found lasting work; this is an increase from the 40,000 in the previous three months.
- Industry published figures for the same period, show almost half a million people had started a job – over 54,000 higher than the three months previously
- This isn't the whole story – many more people have started work but not reached the six month point yet.
